Instructor: Ron Smith, CLPE

Who should attend this course? Laboratory Experts, Crime Scene Investigators, Forensic Specialists, Medical Legal Death Investigators, Medical Examiners, and Criminal Justice Trainers.

You can find so many expert witness testimony courses and webinars today, but they almost always lack a strong focus on the jury.

Yes, all the material regarding rules of evidence, statistics, error rate studies, testing contamination, biases of all kinds, and many other topics are indeed important. But, when the dust settles and the deliberation room door is closed, it is what the jury understands and believes that matters.

The real key to becoming a successful expert witness in forensics is to develop within the jury what I call "forensic trust." This is undoubtedly the most critical responsibility of an expert witness who is called to testify on their forensic examination results. "Forensic Trust" is quite simple to define and understand but can be challenging for the expert to accomplish while on the witness stand. READ MORE
